Bryan of South Is Coming As Orator at Chautauqua Here.

FROM the time they began to delve into the history of the civil war in the schoolroom, the southern people have listened with ever increasing interest to the stirring eulogies of Lincoln by the eloquent orators of the north. The oft repeated story has set their hearts to throbbing and their blood to pulsating with patriotism at the mention of his name.

They have always listened to the orators of the north. Many doubt they have never considered that there is another side to the story of the life of this man.

J. V. Sanders of New Orleans, Dixie's greatest orator, is coming to the Chautauqua on the fourth afternoon of the other side of the story. He is going to tell the story as it is told in the south—by the story. He is going to give the story of Lincoln that the southern people have never heard. Coming to this city with the spirit of the new south, Governor Sanders will tell of "A Southerner's Estimate of Abraham Lincoln."

Governor Sanders began his career as a member of the state legislature. Rapid advancement soon gained for him the speakership of the house and later the governorship of the state of Louisiana. By an almost unanimous vote Governor Sanders was sent to the United States senate, but resigned to serve his people better as governor. He is the one man of the south that took no part in the civil war and secured legislation of the south that took no part in the civil war. His efforts also secured the absolutely prohibitive race-track gambling. His efforts also secured the restriction of the sale of liquor. He comes with a story that has moved thousands.

Your only chance to hear Mr. Sanders is the afternoon of the fourth day at the Chautauqua.
